Limits of Confidentiality

All client/business notes and documents are strictly confidential. Information about your case will not be released or discussed with anyone. Upon written request, a summary of the services received at Chrysalis Connections, LLC can be provided to the requesting client. Family and couple summaries require the approval of all participants. In addition, the following limits of confidentiality exist.

Please note: Confidentiality survives death. Without prior written consent, any information obtained during the course of a professional therapeutic relationship will not be discussed or released to a deceased client's family, significant other, agency, or executor.

Confidentiality must be breached in the following situations:

- If the service provider perceives the client to be a direct or immediate danger to self or others.
- If the service provider learns that a child, elder, or dependent adult is being neglected or abused.
